

Bless Our Doubt

This was written for a service where we looked at the promise Ruth made to Naomi (where you go I will go...) after Naomi had told Ruth to return home rather than journey with her. We liked the idea that there was room for both doubt and certainty in this story.

God, you have met us here.
Now send us out with your promise:

Bless our doubt with your confidence
Bless our certainty with your loving acceptance
Bless our indulgence with your questioning

And bring us back here again,
to unite in your presence:

Bless our doubt with your confidence
Bless our certainty with your loving acceptance
Bless our indulgence with your questioning

Forever, together
©Clare McBeath & Tim Presswood, 2009