

Wisdom Is Spun

The galaxies spin, flinging the stars across the heavens setting their trajectory and shaping the night sky...

For wisdom is spun into the fabric of the universe.

The moon rotates between the sun causing a shadow on the earth the tides ebb and flow setting the rhythm of coastal life...

For wisdom is spun into the fabric of our solar system.

The squirrels busy themselves burying nuts in the park its dark, rain soaked loam keeping winter's food safe...

For wisdom is spun into the fabric of the earth.

The spider patiently spins her intricate web its gossamer thin fragility belies its flexibility and strength...

For wisdom is spun into the fabric of life.

An egg and sperm fuse and a new life begins to grow the body swells and at the appointed time contracts and gives birth..

For wisdom is spun into the fabric of the body.

A wandering teacher and healer gathers a crowd telling down-to earth stories of heaven and touching people's pain...

For wisdom is spun in stories and compassion.

The rabbi takes ordinary bread of daily life and breaks it takes the extravagance of celebratory wine and shares it...

For wisdom is spun in bread and wine.

The prophet is arrested, tried and hung on a cross the tomb of death breaks open to the dawn of new life...

For wisdom is spun in body and blood.

[share bread and wine]

An old man shares jokes with a refugee child crossing the frontiers of language with smiles and jokes...

For wisdom is spun in community.

A family pick weeds from a rain-soaked allotment lovingly tending the ancient soil...

For wisdom is spun in steadfast endurance.

A church open their doors to asylum seekers and teenagers putting peace and sanctuary at risk...

For wisdom is spun in welcome and hospitality.

A foolish church keeps singing and praying refusing to accept the experts' counsel of despair...

For wisdom is spun in hopes and dreams.
